Saddam's Execution Upheld

Iraqi court rules ex-ruler must be hanged within 30 days

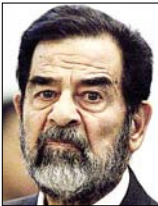

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Iraq's highest court rejected Saddam Hussein's appeal Tuesday and said the former dictator must be hanged within 30 days for his role in the 1982 slayings of 148 Shiite Muslims from a town where assassins tried to kill him. "From tomorrow, any day could be the day" Saddam is sent to the gallows, chief judge Aref Shahin said.

The ruling could stoke Iraq's sectarian rage, with the Shiite majority demanding Saddam's death and most in the formerly dominant Sunni Arab community calling the trial tainted.

In upholding the Saddam sentence imposed Nov. 5, the Supreme Court of Appeals also affirmed death sentences for two of his co-defendants, including his half brother. And it said life imprisonment for a third was too lenient and demanded he be given the death penalty, too.

The White House called the ruling a milestone in Iraq's efforts "to replace the rule of a tyrant with the rule of law."

"Saddam Hussein has received due process and legal rights that he denied the Iraqi people for so long. So this is an important day for the Iraqi people," said deputy White House press secretary Scott Stanzel, who was aboard Air Force One flying from Washington to Waco, Texas. CHRISTOPHER TORCHIA (AP)

Hey Guys, the Police Endorsed My Beer!

Eager to combat drunken driving during the holidays, police are distributing pint glasses embossed with the logo of the Bennington, Va., police department to bars and restaurants. About 160 of the glasses, donated to the department by a glassmaking company, are being given away in hopes that those using them will think twice about getting behind the wheel if they've had too many. "It should give awareness to people and make them pay attention a little more," said T.J. Carmody, owner of a restaurant that got three cases of the glasses last week. "We're not telling people they can't have a good time." (AP)

Learning From Experience

A former Tyler, Texas, drug agent described by one official as a top narcotics officer in the country is selling a how-to video on concealing drugs and fooling police. Barry Cooper has launched a Web site where he will sell his video, "Never Get Busted Again." A promotional video says Cooper will show viewers how to "conceal their stash," "avoid narcotics profiling" and "fool canines every time." Cooper, who said he favors the legalization of marijuana, made the video in part because he believes the nation's fight against drugs is a waste of resources. Busting marijuana users fills up prisons with non-violent offenders, he said. (AP)

Theodore Roosevelt might have been honored to know that the toy named after him has become something of an institution. But that doesn't necessarily mean he'd be ecstatic to know a memorial to him has been replicated with little stuffed bear faces, as it was in this display Thursday at a "Teddy and Friends Around the World in a Day" exhibition. Along with the Seoul event — touted as the world's largest teddy bear exhibit — was a charity auction to raise money for troubled teenagers and children.

ENFORCEMENT

Making People Obey The Law Is Dangerous

A highway speed camera in Wales will be removed because, officials said, it increases the risk of accidents and disrupts the flow of traffic, the Mirror reported. Authorities said motorists brake sharply upon seeing the camera, creating a hazard to drivers behind them. Also, the camera has been blamed for congestion during rush hour as drivers drastically slow their speed to 50 mph on the highway. (EXPRESS)

Oil Pipeline Rupture Spills 21,000 Gallons Into Gulf

Workers Tuesday were trying to contain an oil spill that dumped 21,000 gallons into the Gulf of Mexico after a pipeline ruptured. The U.S. Coast Guard said the spill, about 30 miles southeast of Galveston, came from a rupture in a medium crude oil pipeline owned by Houston-based Plains All American Pipeline. The company detected a pressure loss in the High Island Pipeline System and shut the line down early Sunday, Coast Guard officials said. (AP)

Democrats to Target Oil Tax Breaks

House leaders plan to redistribute funds to conservation efforts

WASHINGTON | House Democrats in the first weeks of the new Congress plan to establish a dedicated fund to promote renewable energy and conservation, using money from oil companies.

That's only one legislative hit the oil industry is expected to take next year as a Congress run by Democrats is likely to show little sympathy to the cash-rich, high-profile business.

Whether the issue is rolling back tax breaks — some approved by Congress only 18 months ago — pushing for more use of ethanol and other biofuels instead of gasoline, or investigations into shortfalls in royalty payments to the government, oil industry lobbyists will spend most of their time playing defense.

Details of a renewable fuels fund have yet to be worked out. Nonetheless, it's one of the initiatives the House will take up during its first 100 hours in session in January, according to aides to Speaker-elect Nancy Pelosi. At least some of the money — revenue gained by rolling back some tax breaks — will go to a program to support research into making ethanol from sources other than corn.

"What we'll do is roll back the subsidies to Big Oil and use the resources to invest in a reserve for research in alternative energy," Pelosi, a California Democrat, recently told reporters.

But the oil issue likely to be first out of the legislative block in January concerns the ability of the federal government to recover royalties many lawmakers believe have been unfairly avoided by oil and gas companies drilling in deep waters of the Gulf of Mexico.

The Interior Department has been trying to get more than 50 companies to rework 1998-99 drilling leases that allow the companies to avoid paying billions of dollars in royalties because of a government mistake in writing the leases.

The industry intransigence has upset many in Congress, both Republicans and Democrats, who say they want to find a way to force the companies back to negotiations on the flawed leases. One approach is legislation barring companies from bidding on future leases unless they agree to renegotiate the flawed ones. H. JOSEF HEBERT (AP)

Senate Investigation Nixes 9/11 Allegations

Lawmakers end probe of conspiracy theory about plane hijackers

WASHINGTON | A lengthy Senate investigation has debunked charges by a Republican congressman that military analysts identified Mohamed Atta and other Sept. 11 hijackers before the attacks, according to a committee aide familiar with the report.

In a letter to members of the Senate Intelligence Committee, Sens. Pat Roberts and John D. Rockefeller dismissed suggestions by Rep. Curt Weldon, R-Pa., that defense analysts ignored analysis that could have prevented the attacks. Roberts, R-Kan., is outgoing chairman and Rockefeller, of West Virginia, is the senior Democrat who will assume the chairmanship next month.

They concluded "there was no evidence Mohamed Atta or any hijackers were identified prior to 9/11," said the committee aide, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

An internal Pentagon assessment already had dismissed Weldon's charges as unfounded. But the letter is the first rejection from Capitol Hill. ANNE FLAHERTY (AP)

Fla. Picks Up After Storms

Cleanup efforts begin after 4 tornadoes hit coast, damaging homes

DAYTONA BEACH, FLA. | Four Christmas Day tornadoes damaged hundreds of Florida homes, with one flipping airplanes at a flight school and tearing the roofs off three apartment buildings, officials confirmed Tuesday.

"It's all gone," said Estelle Hunter, 25, who left her home five minutes before the wind uprooted a tree and slammed it through the roof.

The tornado that hit Daytona Beach on Monday was an F-2, with wind speeds between 113 mph and 157 mph. Its wind tore the roofs off three apartment buildings, extensively damaging many of the 240 units.

At Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University, it hurled an airplane into a wall, sparking a fire, and snapped off wings or flipped about 50 others.

Bush In Texas to Mull Course of Iraq War

President to host a security meeting this week on war planning

CRAWFORD, TEXAS | President Bush went to his ranch Tuesday to rethink U.S. involvement in Iraq as his spokesman hailed a Baghdad court's decision upholding the death sentence for former Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

Saddam, who was deposed by the U.S.-led invasion of Iraq in 2003, is to be hanged within 30 days.

Bush, saddled with low approval ratings for his handling of Iraq, will host a National Security Council meeting on Thursday at the ranch, but is not expected to make any final decision on what he says will be a new way forward in Iraq.

Vice President Dick Cheney, Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice, Defense Secretary Robert Gates and National Security Adviser Stephen Hadley will attend the meeting.

Stanzel said there could be other National Security Council meetings before the president makes up his mind and delivers a speech to announce his decisions. The speech is expected before the State of the Union address on Jan. 23.

Bush is under mounting pressure to change U.S. involvement in Iraq where violence continued to escalate this month.

Stanzel said Bush continues to question advisers and think through the consequences of various U.S. actions. "Our forces, coalition forces in Iraq are continuing to take the fight to the enemy, and the president will announce a new way forward when he's comfortable" with his decision, he said.

Rapist Preys on Male Victims in Houston Suburb

BAYTOWN, TEXAS | A rapist who has struck at least five times since April in and around Baytown has not only spread fear in this working-class community but also piqued the interest of those who study the criminal mind.

The reason: He preys on other men.

The U.S. Justice Department says one in 33 men in the United States has been a victim of a rape or attempted rape, compared with one in six women. Experts say men are far less likely to report a rape to authorities, because they fear being perceived as weak or see the attack as an assault on their masculinity.

Three of the attacks have occurred in the city, the other two on the outskirts of town. The most recent attack was Nov. 30.

Ethiopian, government forces advance in fight against Islamic militia

MOGADISHU, SOMALIA | Somali government soldiers, joined by troops from neighboring Ethiopia, advanced toward Somalia's capital Tuesday as Islamic fighters dug in and promised a "new phase" in the war — a chilling pronouncement from a movement that has threatened suicide attacks.

Somalia called on the Council of Islamic Courts militias, bloodied by a week of artillery and mortar attacks, to surrender and promised amnesty if they lay down their weapons, government spokesman Abdirahman Dinari said.

A U.N. official, meanwhile, said Tuesday that Ethiopian-backed gov-

Francois Lonseny Fall, the top U.N. envoy to Somalia, also said 35,000 Somalis had crossed into neighboring Kenya to escape the fighting, which forced the U.N. to suspend aid delivery to two million Somalis.

As many as 1,000 people may have been killed and 3,000 wounded in the fighting, many of them foreign radicals, Ethiopian Prime Minister Meles Zenawi said.

Meles said about 3,000 to 4,000 Ethiopian forces, which entered Somalia on Saturday, may soon wrap up their offensive against the Islamic militias that until recent days controlled most of southern part of the country.

Sheik Sharif Sheik Ahmed, a top leader of the Islamic group, accused Ethiopian troops of massacring 50 civilians in the central town of Cadado. Ethiopian officials were not immediately available to respond.

Ahmed said his fighters are in tactical retreat in the face of superior Ethiopian firepower. But the military struggle has just begun, he added.

"The war is entering a new phase," Ahmed said from Mogadishu, the capital. "We will fight Ethiopia for a long, long time and we expect the war to go everywhere."

Car Bombs, Attacks in Iraq Kill 54

U.S. death toll reaches 90 for December as tough month nears end

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | A string of car bombs and other blasts killed at least 54 Iraqis on Tuesday, including 17 outside Baghdad's most venerated Sunni mosque, while U.S. troops battled Shiite militiamen in Baghdad.

Seven more American soldiers died, the U.S. military said, pushing the December death toll to 90 in one of the bloodiest months for the American troops in Iraq this year. Some 105 troops were killed in October.

In the most lethal incident Tuesday, three parked cars exploded one after another in western Baghdad, police and Iraqi media reported. The blasts killed 25 people and wounded 55, one physician said by telephone, as he watched the victims being carried into Yarmouk hospital. The doctor spoke on condition of anonymity because of security concerns.

An Iraqi man walks between vehicles at the scene of a car bombing in Baghdad.

Perhaps the most politically significant attack came in Azamiyah, a Sunni enclave of Iraq's capital, where a car bomb exploded near the Abu Hanifa mosque, according to Iraqi media. That blast killed 17 and wounded 35, said a physician at the nearby Nuaman Hospital, who also asked to remain anonymous.

The explosion tore through a busy square at the start of the evening rush hour. The mosque is Sunni Islam's holiest shrine in Baghdad, and a regular target of Shiite mortar teams. LAUREN FRAYER (AP)

No big waves materialized.

Scores Die In Pipeline Explosion

At least 260 Nigerians killed after tapped gas line bursts into flame

LAGOS, NIGERIA | A gasoline pipeline ruptured by thieves burst into flames Tuesday as scavengers collected the fuel in a poor neighborhood, killing at least 260 people in the latest oil-industry disaster to hit Africa's biggest petroleum producer.

Braving a towering pillar of flames and a cloud of acrid black smoke, thousands of residents of Lagos' Abule Egba neighborhood surged toward rescue workers carrying away charred bodies, hoping to catch a glimpse of missing family members.

"My brother, my brother," wept 19-year-old Suboke Adebayo as an unidentified charred male corpse was loaded into a waiting ambulance.

Residents said a gang of thieves had been illegally tapping the pipe for months, carting away gasoline in tankers for resale.

Pipeline tapping is a common practice in Nigeria, where a majority of the country's 130 million people live in poverty despite their country's role as Africa's leading crude producer. KATHARINE HOURELD (AP)

Doctor: Castro Not Ill With Cancer

MADRID, SPAIN | A Spanish surgeon who treated Fidel Castro said the ailing Cuban leader does not have cancer, insisting Tuesday he was recovering slowly but progressively from a serious operation.

The comments by Dr. Jose Luis Garcia Sabrido, the chief surgeon at Madrid's Gregorio Maranon Hospital, represented the first independent medical assessment of Castro's condition since the Cuban leader underwent emergency intestinal surgery in July. The Cuban government has kept Castro's condition a state secret, occasionally releasing photographs and videos of him to show he is convalescing.

Garcia Sabrido visited Havana last week to examine Castro and consult with his medical team.

"He hasn't got cancer," Garcia Sabrido said, adding that he believed Castro could be physically capable of running the country again. "While respecting confidentiality, I can tell you that President Castro is not suffering from any malignant sickness." (AP)

Renters Wait Out Home Sales Slump

Some breathe sigh of relief as housing market hits slowdown

The housing slump has been painful for millions of people who work in real estate or recently bought a house.

For Patrick Killelea, however, this year has been one long victory lap. Killelea, a 41-year-old software engineer, has long preached that it makes more economic sense to rent than buy homes. He recalls shouting "Wow!" when he heard about September's 9.7 percent drop in prices of new homes.

"I didn't want to gloat," he said. "But then again, maybe I did."

For years, Americans who refused to buy real estate at what they considered excessive prices were ribbed for failing to profit from one of the greatest booms in history.

Now, with the housing market in a slump, renters who sat out the boom are finally getting some satisfaction.

Dean Baker, an economist, believes that the slump validates his decision to sell a two-bedroom condo in Washington's Adams Morgan neighborhood two years ago. Baker says he received $450,000 for the unit, which he had bought for just $160,000 in 1997. Since unloading the condo, he and his wife, Helene Jorgensen, also an economist, have been renting an apartment nearby for about $2,300 a month.

Of course, as even many hardcore renters acknowledge, homeownership has some big advantages, including tax deductions, the possibility of gaining value over the long term and the security of knowing you won't be evicted by a capricious landlord.

While some economists argue that the housing slump is nearly over, Baker insists, "We're just at the beginning of it." JAMES R. HAGERTY (THE WALL STREET JOURNAL)

Retailers Pin Hopes On Post-Holiday Push

NEW YORK | America's retailers ushered in the post-Christmas shopping season on Tuesday by slashing prices even more on holiday items and stocking up on full-price merchandise.

With the 2006 pre-Christmas season falling short of sales expectations for many merchants, the retail industry hoped that shoppers, armed with gift cards, would spend freely in the weeks ahead on discounted items as well as fresh merchandise.

The big exceptions were luxury stores and online businesses, both of which did better than expected this holiday season. Amazon.com reported Tuesday that the season finished as its "best ever," with the busiest day being Dec. 11.

Meanwhile, deep discounting of flat-panel TVs and other gadgets led to a buying surge, as well as a profit blow to Best Buy Co. and Circuit City Stores Inc.

A big negative factor this season was mild temperatures throughout most of the U.S., which slowed sales of winter items like coats and snow boots. ANNE D'INNOCENZIO (AP)

Fuel Costs Drop Amid Mild Weather

WASHINGTON | Oil and natural gas prices fell hard Tuesday amid mild winter weather that has depressed demand for home-heating fuels.

Trading volume was light and that exaggerated the moves lower, analysts said.

Light sweet crude for February delivery declined $1.31, or 2 percent, to settle at $61.10 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

"The weather is taking a big hold of this market," said Societe Generale commodity strategist Mike Guido, who estimated that consumption of home-heating fuels in the Northeast was as much as 30 percent below normal over the past 45 days. (AP)

Va. Case Review Delayed

Crime lab director says DNA testing is years behind schedule

A year after Virginia's crime lab launched an unprecedented review of old cases that experts said could free dozens of wrongly convicted people, the project appears to be years from completion and some are questioning the credentials of the private company selected to do the DNA testing.

Former Gov. Mark R. Warner ordered a full review of the cases in December 2006 after an analysis of old evidence revealed that two men were not guilty of sexual assault. Warner pardoned the men, who became part of a wave of exonerations that reignited a national debate over post-conviction DNA testing.

At the time, state crime lab director Paul Ferrara predicted the retesting project would be completed within two years and could free dozens of innocent inmates. But now, just days from retirement, Ferrara has revised his prediction, saying changes at the lab have stalled progress. CANDACE RONDEAUX (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Death Penalty Case in D.C. Allowed

WASHINGTON | The District will see just the third capital punishment case tried in the past 30 years after a federal judge said prosecutors can seek the death penalty in a trial against a man.

Capital punishment is not allowed under district law. But Larry Gooch could get the death penalty because he is charged under federal law.

Law enforcement officials say he was an enforcer in the "M Street Crew" drug gang. Gooch faces charges of murdering five people, racketeering and drug charges.

In a 60-page report, a federal district judge disagreed with defense arguments that the case should be tried in D.C. Superior Court, where there is no death penalty. Instead, the judge said, the case is correctly charged under federal law.

Gooch is charged in the August 2000 deaths of Christopher Lane, 19, and William Cunningham, 27; the September 2002 killing of Miguel Miles, 34; and the February 2003 deaths of Calvin Cooper, 40, and his girlfriend, Yolanda Miller, 32. (AP)

Bromwell, insurance group agree to part as he prepares for trial

A former Maryland state senator indicted on public corruption charges will leave his position as president and chief executive of the state Injured Workers' Insurance Fund by the end of the year, under an agreement announced Tuesday by the board that oversees the state agency.

Thomas L. Bromwell will receive two years of his $200,000 annual salary, plus health benefits for 18 months, according to the agreement reached with the board of directors of the quasi-public insurance company. The company, which has assets totaling more than $1 billion, is the state's largest carrier of workers' compensation insurance.

Daniel E. McKew, chairman of the board, praised Bromwell's "exceptional leadership" of the company for the last three years.

The board "wishes him a successful outcome of his trial, which we recognize will require his full and undivided attention," McKew said.

Bromwell's trial is scheduled to begin in March in federal court in Baltimore. ANN E. MARIMOW (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Santa Fe To Go

Take a New Mexico road trip in Georgia O'Keeffe country

ON THE ROAD | The beauty of northern New Mexico's high deserts and mountains enchanted artist Georgia O'Keeffe when she first visited Santa Fe and Taos, and she made this majestic landscape her home—and the subject of many of her paintings—for almost the last four decades of her life.

Ah, Georgia, I thought repeatedly as I recently toured what fans like me now call "O'Keeffe Country," if only I could stay on as you did.

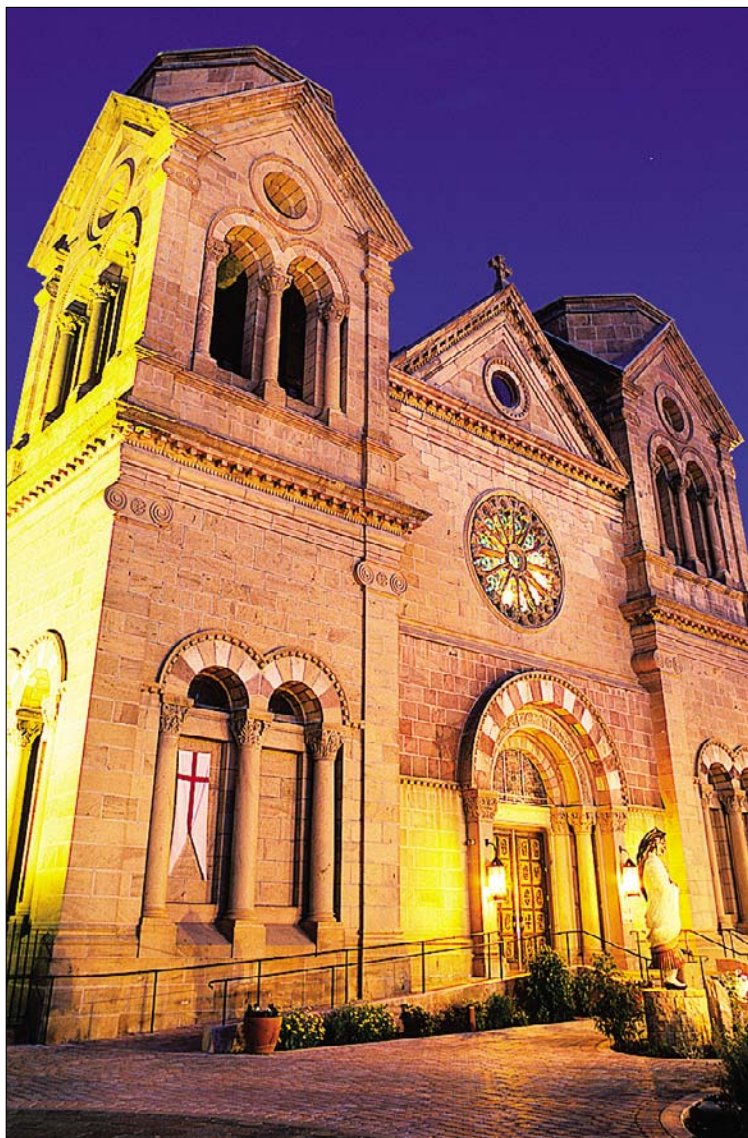

Futile dream that one, but at least I got to live it for a few days. And you can, too.

Although Santa Fe and Taos rank today as highly sophisticated arts-oriented communities, they prove surprisingly easy on the wallet. For all its ritzy appeal, New Mexico counts as one of America's cheaper vacation places.

Figure on paying about $45 to $60 a night in summer to rent a double in a name-brand motel and under $10 per person for a heaping dinner plate of tacos, enchiladas, and other Mexican dishes savored in the Southwest.

Much of the art can be viewed for free in dozens of galleries in both towns. On a recent Friday night in Santa Fe, my wife and I went gallery hopping, sipping complimentary champagne or ginger ale and nibbling hors d'oeuvres at a series of public art-show debuts.

We felt like locals, chatting with the artists and gallery owners.

The mission church of San Geronimo, one of the earliest in New Mexico, was built near Taos Pueblo in the early 17th century by Roman Catholic missionaries.

A resident of New York in her younger years, O'Keeffe learned to drive when she moved to New Mexico, turning her car into a mobile studio.

This is a trip for art lovers in a rugged land that also draws lots of hardy backpackers, mountain bikers, and white-water enthusiasts. JAMES THURSTON (BUDGET TRAVEL MAGAZINE)

Nissan's new hybrid has an identity crisis, but is still a good idea

ROAD TEST | You know that horror movie where the mad scientist straps two victims to gurneys, lowers the metal skull caps on them and, by dint of special effects the victims' personalities are switched?

The 2007 Nissan Altima hybrid is like that. The company's first effort at a gas-electric auto drives like a Nissan with a soul transplant: ninja-in-the-night silence at low speeds; a tremble when the gas engine lights up; bubbly, torque-infused acceleration as the gas and electric motors pull on the oars.

This is not a car that Nissan wanted to build, particularly. Nissan company was building the Altima hybrid at a loss only to comply with California's partial zero-emission vehicle mandate.

Yet, collectively, Nissan seems to have had a come-to-Jesus moment on hybrids. Recently, Nissan announced its "Green Program 2010," which — in addition to looking for cuts in carbon emissions from its factories — will develop a hybrid vehicle using in-house technology, as well as pursue plug-in hybrid and all-electric technology. Nissan also announced it would create its own company to produce and market advanced lithium-ion batteries, which are the critical component to make alternative vehicles work.

Bookmark this moment in cars history, because what is emerging is something like consensus.

Hybrid doubters — who once railed that the batteries were sketchy, the costs of the "hybrid premium" unrecoverable, the mileage gains overstated, and so on — are beginning to look like the Flat Earth Society. DAN NEIL (THE LOS ANGELES TIMES)

Redskins on Record-Breaking Pace

Team is set to pass franchise marks in all the wrong categories

REDSKINS | With one game left in their season and another offseason of scrutiny ahead, the Washington Redskins will hope to avoid setting several records Saturday against the New York Giants. The Redskins, 5-10 and without consecutive victories since Oct. 1, are on the verge of setting franchise and league marks — for all of the wrong things.

A loss would put the Redskins at 5-11, matching their lowest win total in any season since 1994, and would give the team the worst season of coach Joe Gibbs's career (he won six games in 2004). Gibbs is already assured of having more losing seasons (two) in his return, than he had in his first stint from 1981-1992. With a loss Saturday, the Redskins would finish 1-5 against the NFC East for the second time in three years; the team has not finished that low in such a short period since placing last in 1993-1994.

"We don't want New York to sweep us," Gibbs said. "That's a big deal for us. We want to finish the right way."

Gibbs is 21-26 since his return; Washington's record over the previous three seasons was 20-28.

Washington has just 12 takeaways this season, and will need to force three turnovers Saturday just to tie the all-time low for a 16-week season. St. Louis and Green Bay each caused 15 takeaways in the 2004 season; the Redskins have just six in the last 10 games.

"That kind of blows my mind, how we wound up in that situation," Gibbs said of the drought.

The team has just 18 sacks for the season and will need a huge reversal not to set a franchise low in that department (the 2001 Redskins had 25 sacks). The Redskins also have

NFC Playoff Picture Not So Simple

Jets and Broncos are in the driver's seat for the last two AFC spots

FOOTBALL | The New York Giants have lost six of their last seven games and have played worse than uninspired football for the entire second half of the season. Yet if they win Saturday night in Washington, they almost surely will make the playoffs.

That's because the Giants control almost all the tiebreakers among the five 7-8 teams vying for the NFC's last wild-card spot. They are tied with Green Bay for the best conference record at 6-5 and their strength of victory and strength of schedule is prohibitively better than the Packers.

The scenario is simpler in the AFC, where Denver and the New York Jets (both 9-6) just have to win and they get the fifth and sixth spots. Both are at home to Bay Area teams — the Jets to dismal Oakland (2-13) and the Broncos to improved but still building San Francisco (6-9).

Because of all that mediocrity, 20 teams are alive going into the last weekend of the regular sea-and 11 more are in the running for three berths, although some are real long shots.

WEEK 17 CRUISERS

Nine teams have clinched playoff spots heading into the last week of the NFL season:

- The Bears have clinched home field throughout the playoffs.
- The Saints and Chargers have both secured first-round byes.
- Those clubs, plus the Patriots, Ravens, Colts, and Seahawks, have all won their respective divisions.
- The Eagles and Cowboys have both clinched at least a wild card playoff berth.

No team with a losing record has made the NFL playoffs during a non-strike season.

The NFC is a mess, in large part because the so-called "good" teams — the Giants, Carolina and defending conference champion Seattle — have been anything but, especially down the stretch.

Among those three they have lost 13 of their last 15 games, and one of the wins was by New York over the Panthers. Seattle (8-7) is in the playoffs, backing in as champions of the West last week when San Francisco lost to Arizona. But the Seahawks, who play in Tampa on Sunday, have lost three straight, not the kind of momentum you want to take into the postseason. DAVE GOLDBERG (AP)

Better the 2nd Time Around the Ice

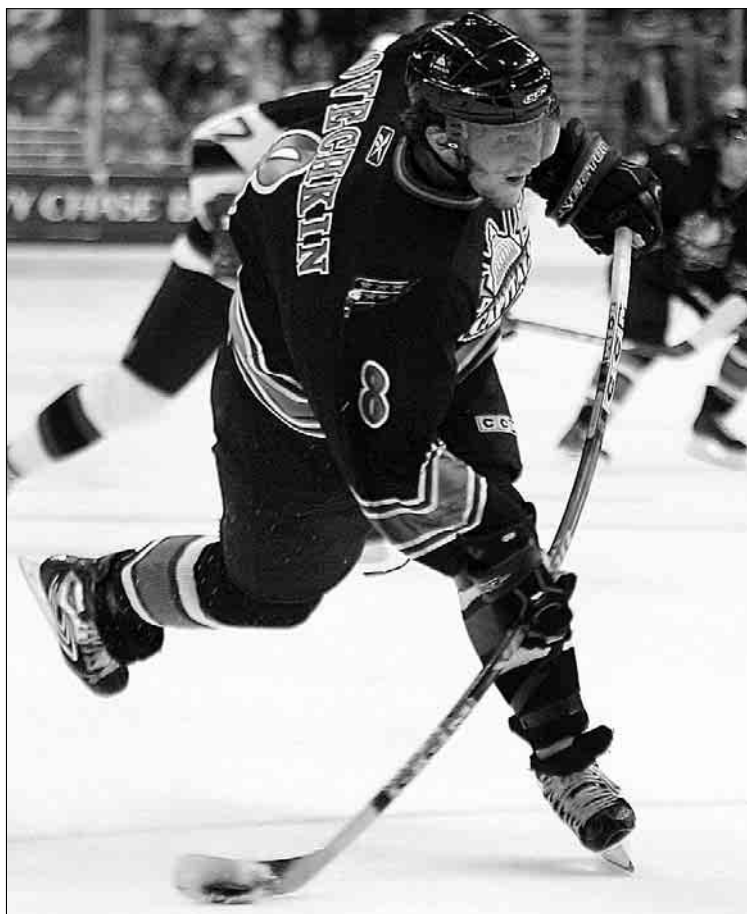

The Caps' Ovechkin has been a model of consistency this year

CAPITALS | Close to halfway through his second NHL season, Alex Ovechkin is getting comfortable in Washington. He has homes in both Arlington and cyberspace — where his recently unveiled Web site asks fans to “hang out, leave me a message and talk to each other” — and supports his own dedicated fan section, the “Crazy 8s.”

He's also made himself comfortable in front of the opposition net. Facing the pressure to live up to his award-winning rookie season, the responsibility to carry his team and eager defensemen with a year's worth of film to reference, Ovechkin is having a blast and scoring at a rate ahead of last season's. His 24 goals in 35 games were the best in the NHL heading into Tuesday night's action.

“It's the second year. I have experience,” Ovechkin said. “Off the ice, on the ice, you learn to play in the NHL. I learn how I must play and the coach teaches me a lot.”

He also has yet to miss a game despite a physical approach uncommon among skillful scorers. He's shattered glass with one hit this season and was ejected for another.

Steelers coach Bill Cowher said he will discuss possible retirement next week.

Cowher to Announce Plans Soon

Steelers may be looking for their 3rd new coach since 1969 next week

FOOTBALL | Bill Cowher apparently won't make anyone wait to learn if he will return as the Pittsburgh Steelers' coach next season.

Cowher is expected to announce his future plans within a few days of Sunday's season-ending game at Cincinnati, one that is without playoff implications for the no-longer-defending Super Bowl champion Steelers (7-8).

“That's for next week,” Cowher said Tuesday when asked if he would return next season. “We'll talk about that next week. It won't go long. I'm not sure what the time frame is. But I think the most important thing is to be focused on this game.”

That he appears ready to announce his decision quickly could be a sign the Steelers may soon be looking for a new coach for only the second time since 1969. Chuck Noll (1969-91) and Cowher (1992-present) have been their only coaches since then.

Two Steelers assistants, offensive coordinator Ken Whisenhunt and offensive line coach Russ Grimm, are seen as viable candidates — even though the Steelers haven't promoted a coach from within since Mike Nixon in 1965.

Several players, including Joey Porter, said recently they expect Cowher to return for a 16th season. ALAN ROBINSON (AP)

Questions Answered in Baltimore

Ravens have taken the NFL by storm and are ready for a playoff run

RAVENS | As they stumbled to a 6-10 finish a year ago, the Baltimore Ravens were forced to answer serious questions about the state of a team that fully expected to be in the Super Bowl.

Could the Ravens win with Kyle Boller at quarterback? Was Jamal Lewis still capable of carrying the running game? Could Ray Lewis still dominate at middle linebacker, or even stay healthy for an entire season? And, most importantly, could coach Brian Billick cope with the toned-down persona demanded by owner Steve Bisciotti?

Ravens RB Jamal Lewis was a major question mark coming into this season.

Twelve months later, only one question surrounds the rejuvenated Ravens: How far can they go in the playoffs?

Given that this team has far more balance than the one that won the 2001 Super Bowl, there's reason to believe the Ravens could finish the season under a sea of confetti, taking turns hoisting the Vince Lombardi Trophy.

“With the type of defense we play and the way our offense is clicking right now,” Ray Lewis said, “we're going to be a hard team to beat in the playoffs.”

The Ravens (12-3) must first take care of a few minor details, beginning with a victory over Buffalo at home Sunday. That will provide Baltimore with a coveted first-round bye and enable the Ravens to finish no worse than the No. 2 seed in the AFC.

“It's clear what's at stake for us,” Billick said Tuesday.

Baltimore can earn home-field advantage throughout the AFC playoffs if it defeats Buffalo and San Diego loses to Arizona. Even if that combination doesn't occur, the Ravens are in excellent position for a playoff run.

Asked if the team has reached its peak, Billick said, “I hope not. I think this team really believes we've got our best football ahead of us, and they're excited about that.”

EXHIBITING FUNNY BEHAVIOR: The comedy "Night at the Museum," starring Ben Stiller, scared away all other holiday weekend competition, coming in No. 1 at the box office last weekend. "Rocky Balboa" also had a respectable showing.

TOKENS OF AFFECTION: Fans lay mementoes, flowers and candles on James Brown's Hollywood Walk of Fame star.

Godfather Rests

Soul legend James Brown's colorful life comes to an end

APPRECIATION | "Godfather of Soul" James Brown remained the hardest-working man in show business to the end, telling friends from his hospital bed that he would be in Times Square on New Year's Eve.

His heart gave out a few hours later, on Christmas morning.

All Christmas day, famous fans from Mick Jagger to Snoop Dogg to the Rev. Al Sharpton shared memories of their mentor and idol, while other fans left candles on Brown's Hollywood Walk of Fame star and streamed to his statue in his boyhood hometown of Augusta, Ga.

"Y'all lost the Godfather of Soul, but I lost my father. I know the whole world loved him just as much as we loved him, so we're not mourning by ourselves," Brown's daughter Venisha Brown told The Augusta Chronicle.

The 73-year-old pompadoured dynamo, whose classic singles include "Papa's Got a Brand New Bag" and "I Got You (I Feel Good)," died of heart failure less than two days after he had been hospitalized with pneumonia and only three days after leading his annual holiday toy giveaway in Augusta.

"I ain't got the same energy," Brown had told the New York Post a week earlier, "but I'm sharper."

One of the major musical influences of the past 50 years, James Brown was to rhythm and dance music what Bob Dylan was to lyrics. From Jagger to Michael Jackson, David Bowie to Public Enemy, his rapid-footed dancing, hard-charging beats and heartfelt yet often unintelligible vocals changed the musical landscape.

Brown, who lived in Beech Island, S.C., near the Georgia line, had a turbulent personal life that included charges of abusing drugs and alcohol.

His stage act was as memorable, and as imitated, as his records, with his twirls and spins and flowing cape, his repeated faints to the floor. With his tight pants, eye makeup and outrageous hair, Brown set the stage for younger stars such as Jackson and Prince. And the early rap generation overwhelmingly sampled his music and voice as they laid the foundation of hip-hop culture.

"He was dramatic to the end — dying on Christmas Day," said the Rev. Jesse Jackson, a civil rights leader and a friend of Brown's since 1955. "Almost a dramatic, poetic moment. He'll be all over the news all over the world today. He would have it no other way."

Cox Digs Up Some Tasty 'Dirt'

The new FX series shines the spotlight on the paparazzi

THE SCOOP | In her seductive new FX broadcast network series, "Dirt," Courtney Cox plays Lucy Spiller, the editor of tabloid magazines.

The series deftly layers glamour's standard trappings over a surreal heart of darkness — Lucy's favorite paparazzo (played by Ian Hart) is schizophrenic, and we see his pained hallucinations as he pains his celebrity targets. Then there's the show's layered depiction of the relationship between the entertainment industry and the tabloids.

Cox isn't just going along for the ride: "Dirt" is from the production company she runs with her husband, David Arquette, 35. The two are executive producers with series creator Matthew Carnahan and writer Joel Fields.

"It all stemmed from when I was pregnant," Cox said in a phone interview. "The paparazzi was really hounding me ... and some really crazy stuff happened."

Does Cox find it difficult to approach the tabloid world with any degree of understanding, if not sympathy?

"I feel like there's two sides to everything," she said. "Also, it's television. You love to hate characters — that's always a fun thing — but you also have to have something you can hold on to, to be able to relate to them."

"We're not really trying to take anybody down," she added.

HOMIES ALONE: The psychobilly stalwarts check in to the Rock 'n' Roll Hotel.

Retro for Moderns

Punk-rockbilly band Pessimist Parade gives the scene a jolt

LOCAL HEROES | "We're coming through. You better watch out, homie," Pessimist Parade bassist Flora Lucini warns. After playing countless gigs in the D.C. punk underground and around the mid-Atlantic area over the past several years, the psychobilly quartet is finally performing at the Black Cat, where they'll open for District hardcore heavyweights Alleged Bricks and V.P.R.

Lucini's bandmates, none of whom is older than 23, are equally brash. Drummer Rio Samsie, guitarist Thomas Slick and singer JJ Damage are justifiably proud of their ability to meld your grandfather's blues scales with the speed, energy and over-the-top antics of punk rock. The band, which covers Johnny Cash and Johnny Thunders in addition to performing originals, clearly draws from varied inspirations like Hank Williams, GG Allin, Chuck Berry and D.C. punk lifer Kent Stax.

Bands have fused punk and rock-abilly since the '70s, though. Does PP offer anything new? "Yes," Lucini replied. "Colored people!" (Lucini is Afro-Brazilian; Samsie's of Indonesian origin.)

Damage said he thinks his band "brings a lot to the table, energy-wise. Bands aren't as nuts as we are. I roll around and Tom gets out in the audience and plays and we're able to keep a beat at the same time. We play a lot of older, punk-sounding stuff, too, on top of the psychobilly stuff."

Slick — who claims to have been "born and raised on the streets of Southeast Capitol Hill" — said what separates his band from others is a mission to "bring back danger."

And Samsie maintains that D.C. could use a little danger. He wishes "people would see D.C. as more than a 'DeaDCity.' People think there's nothing going on anymore, which is not true at all. There's a good punk scene, a good hardcore scene. There's lots of good bands. Just because the era of [Fugazi's Ian] MacKaye is over, doesn't mean that it's over!" TIM FOLLOS (EXPRESS)

3 GOLDEN GLOBE NOMINATIONS

BEST ACTRESS () JUDI DENCH
BEST SUPPORTING ACTRESS CATE BLANCHETT
BEST SCREENPLAY PATRICK MARBER

“A WICKED DELIGHT. YOU’LL HANG ON EVERY TWIST AND TURN.”
DAVID ANSEN, NEWSWEEK

BAZ BAMIGBOYE, DAILY MAIL

“A CINEMATIC TRIUMPH OF SCALDING INTENSITY.”
REX REED, THE NEW YORK OBSERVER

“If you want to see explosive acting, just watch Judi Dench and Cate Blanchett ignite. This is the bravest, riskiest role of Dench's film career. It's spellbinding to watch her blow the lid off.”
Peter Travers, ROLLING STONE

“Anyone who loves live-wire acting will gasp in awe at Blanchett, more emotionally exposed than ever, and at Dame Judi, who's so electric she makes you quiver.”
DAVID EDELSTEIN, NEW YORK MAGAZINE

Marriage

Same-sex couples pay big bucks to have glamorous weddings

He's no celebrity, but when Phillip McKee III tied the knot in September, he did it with all the pomp and circumstance of an A-list: custom-designed gold rings, a $2,000 kilt and a caviar-and-crepe reception at a posh hotel.

McKee, 34, sank some $60,000 into his Scottish-themed nuptials, worth it he says for the chance to stand before a minister and be pronounced husband — and husband.

Even as lawmakers across the nation debate legislation banning same-sex marriage, couples are uniting in weddings both miniature and massive, fueling a growing industry peddling everything from pink triangle invitations to same-sex cake toppers.

Vendors say attention to the marriage issue has encouraged more gay couples to recognize their relationships, though in most states the ceremonies are purely sentimental.

"For the longest time, there was so much shame and privacy around it that people didn't really give themselves permission to have ceremonies like this,” said Kathryn Hamm, an Arlington-based wedding con-states that have banned gay marriage, such as Georgia, where an annual wedding expo her company hosts draws about 500, mostly black gays and lesbians.

“We’re showing this is how much we love each other, whether it’s legal or not.”

VINYLELLE WHITE, VA. BRIDE

Vynelle White and Madeline Jones of Richmond spent $4,000 — a month's worth of their combined income — on their ceremony.

"It may sound really stupid to say, but why not?" said White, who chose an African-themed wedding. "We're showing this is how much we love each other, whether it's legal or not."

McKee and Woods invited 200 guests to their black-tie ceremony, followed by a cocktail hour and reception at the Ritz-Carlton in Tysons Corner. Groomsmen received engraved sultant who planned McKee's marriage to partner Nopadon Woods. "[Now] the market is growing as the headlines remain out there."

Unlike the multibillion-dollar traditional wedding industry, experts say the gay wedding business is harder to track. Some estimates place its value at up to $1 billion.

In 2005, gays spent $7.2 million with vendors found at the Rainbow Wedding Network Web site, according to data collected by the site, which publishes a national magazine and hosts wedding expos. That's up from $2.1 million in 2002, according to Cindy Sproul, who co-owns the North Carolina firm.

Marriage-minded gays and lesbians are purchasing basics like flowers and limousine rentals. But vendors say couples also are spending on items with a same-sex twist: rainbow bejeweled rings, double-bride thank you cards and "His and His" towel sets.

"We almost completely parallel what heterosexual couples are doing," Sproul said. "The only difference is there may be two grooms, or two brides."

Sproul estimated gay couples spend about $20,000 on ceremonies in states offering some form of recognition, like Massachusetts and Vermont. But couples elsewhere also are investing: Sproul said couples average $15,000 on ceremonies in pocket watches; a bagpiper, pianist and DJ serenaded guests, who dined on caviar and lobster. The ceremony cost half their annual income.

In Virginia, the men were no more legally bound after the lavish wedding than before.

Still, they considered it a good investment. "For us, the essence of a marriage is our love," McKee said. "Whether the state honors it is the icing on the cake — it's not the cake itself." DIONNE WALKER (AP)

Microwave Managing

Moguls

How one man made a fortune by creating a frozen-food empire

Jeno Paulucci may not know much, but he does know food.

He sees the world through a microwave oven — through ravioli, chicken marsala and pot roasts ready in moments, and through stomachs run empty by busy schedules.

You may never have heard of him, but he's probably been feeding you and your family for decades.

Even at 88 years old, the frozen food mogul whose current lines include Michelina's and Budget Gourmet is still peddling products all over the world. He recently began shipping to Russia, and is poised soon to hit the Chinese market. Paulucci is also starting a new line of appetizers called Bundinos, which are frozen buns filled with turkey or pizza ingredients.

“Wherever there’s a microwave, I believe we should have our product.”

JENO PAULUCCI, MICHELINA'S

“I try to keep ahead of the timing,” Paulucci said. “Wherever there’s a microwave, I believe we should have our product.”

It began with Chun King lo mein in the 1940s and mushroomed into pizza and pasta lines. He is perhaps best known for his namesake Jeno's pizza rolls, though he sold that company to General Mills in 1985 for some $150 million and a big load of regret. “I should’ve kept the pizza roll. It’s something that’ll damn near live forever,” he said.

Born three decades before anyone had a home microwave, Paulucci started his Chun King business in 1944 with a $2,500 loan, and sold it to R.J. Reynolds less than two decades later for $63 million. He says he has started around 70 companies, some more successful than others.

For all his success, there are a few calls Paulucci would like back. He sold off shares in surgical staple and packing wrap companies because he didn't think they'd take off or quibbled with owners. He started several restaurants that failed for various reasons (bad locations, bad managers or his own stubbornness).

Though still designing new entrees, Paulucci hasn't been to the grocery store in a decade. He says he has never touched a computer, and prefers that employees use e-mail only if there's no other option.

He details many of his experiences in a recent book called “Jeno: The Power of the Peddler.”

As a young barker at a food market, Paulucci persuaded customers to buy discolored bananas by calling them “Argentine” and bumping up the price.

Paulucci still lives much the same as he used to. He works in the same nondescript but cozy office, sampling products and hassling vendors who make his life difficult. He starts work at 8 a.m. now, instead of 6 a.m., because he and longtime wife Lois take a little longer to help each other get ready.

He is also now legally blind. Staff members read things to him, and he's got a well-lit office and machine that enlarges print.

He's not ready to retire. He intends to sell Michelina's and start something else, and in the meantime presides over the entry into China. The first shipments will leave in January or February, and the company is still trying to get a few more wholesalers.

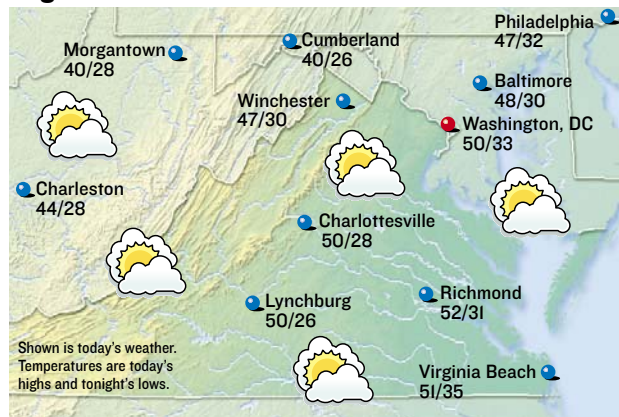

“Other than being with my wife, Lois, I've got nothing to do,” he said. “Relaxing makes me nervous.”

BLACK TIE BABY! This enthusiastic mannequin displays tuxedo-inspired duds at the Ann Taylor Loft in Times Square.

Well-Suited

Ladies can get gussied up in a penguin suit, too

Special occasions require special occasion clothes, and if there's ever an evening to pluck the tuxedo from the back of your closet, New Year's Eve is probably it.

That means women, too.

Tuxedos, or at least "tuxedo-inspired" pieces, have been all over the runways and red carpets as black-tie fashion took a 180-degree turn from embellished glittery gowns to, well, black ties.

It's a style that sees ebbs and flows in popularity but hasn't really completely fallen out of favor since Yves Saint Laurent introduced Le Smoking tuxedo in 1966.

Saint Laurent's Le Smoking was an extension of the revolution he'd started a few years earlier by pushing pants for women, says Valerie Steele, director of the Museum at the Fashion Institute of Technology in Manhattan.

In the 1970s, it was the Studio 54 glitterati — women such as Bianca Jagger — who would dare wear a tuxedo, observes Avril Graham, executive editor of Harper's Bazaar. But it has become a more acceptable form of cocktail and eveningwear for women all over the country.

"For those attempting this look for the first time, it goes without saying that the obvious, i.e. the pleated shirt and black bow tie, should be avoided at all costs. Adapt this look to suit your body type. There are great tuxedos out there that cater to all shapes and are very chic," said Graham.

When Tom Ford was charged with reinvigorating YSL in 1999, he used the company's archives as guidance and also reinvigorated the brand's signature tuxedo, giving it an even slimmer, sexier fit.

"I think that the reason there is a timeless and constant appeal of a beautiful woman in a tuxedo or even a man's tailored suit is that the hard clean lines of a tuxedo set of the feminine curves and soft beauty of a woman by standing in stark contrast to them," Ford said, "thus making them more apparent, powerful and striking."

The tuxedo can't change too much or it will lose its strong presence, says Steele of FIT. "It's like a traditional riding habit: You don't change it very much unless you're making a statement. ... The beauty of the tuxedo is it's a classic."

A little tweak is OK, though: FIT has in its collection a very dark blue tuxedo-style dress by YSL that Steele says is stunning.

And Graham says the recent shift to skinny-leg pants gives the tuxedo an instant update. Her favorite versions come from Chanel, Jil Sander, Ralph Lauren and Giorgio Armani. Some trendsetters have also dared to wear Dior Homme's slim tuxedos, which really were intended for fashion-forward men.

More accessible brands also see the value of ever-so-slightly changing the black-tie look to meet modern demands. Viktor & Rolf's collection for Hennes & Mauritz and Ann Taylor Loft both featured tuxedo details in their holiday collections.

The key to pulling off the look is finding the most flattering style for your shape. A curvier woman should choose a wider leg and a strappy platform shoe, Bazaar's Graham advises, but for those who are tall and thin, go for the skinny legs and a high-heel sandal. "This version of a tuxedo can look like a knockout."

But a tuxedo on a woman will never be as fancy as a ballgown. A woman attending a lavish black-tie event probably should opt for something more feminine, Graham says. "It's ironic that 'black-tie event' actually refers only to a black tie for men." SAMANTHA CRITCHELL (AP)

Not the Bee's Knees

We adore Burt's Bees lip balm and will accept no other. Good thing we'll have lots of money to spend on it, because we're not going near their new Body Butters ($13, burtsbees.com) again. The Cocoa Butter and Macadamia Nut scent smells like the tropics gone bad, while the formula looks like Crisco and sticks like flypaper. We can't recommend anything that makes us shriek, "EW, EW, EW! GET IT OFF! GET IT OFF!" KRISTEN PAGE-KIRBY (EXPRESS)

Hair

Hold On for a Sale

We guess Ted Gibson's Beautiful Hairspray isn't too bad. It comes out really nicely, with a light mist, rather than a laser beam-like zap of shellac. And it smells really hairspray-y, but, you know, it's hairspray. It's not gonna smell like flowers and chocolate. And it held pretty well — it's light hold, so it took care of frizzies, but it didn't do any heavy lifting. So we guess ... Wait a second. It's THIRTY-TWO DOLLARS (drugstore.com)? For HAIRSPRAY? How come the obviously enclosed genie didn't come out of our bottle? We want our three wishes! K.P.K.

Metro to Let the Music Play

TRANSIT | If you like music with your Metrorail experience, you'll love this: A one-year pilot program to allow limited performances by musicians and other artists has been approved by the Metro board, The Post's Lena H. Sun reported last week.

The performers would be selected by local arts councils, who would pay them stipends.

Metro says the performances would take place outside, not inside, Metrorail stations — and likely outside major transit hubs such as transfer points. Metro is still considering which stations to select.

How do you feel about Metro's decision to allow performances?

Let us know by leaving a comment online or e-mail us at COMMENTS@READEXPRESS.COM.

ICC Reaction Continues

COMMENTS | Our comment thread about the plan to build the Inter-county Connector in Maryland — a highway that would link I-370 to the I-95/Route 1 corridor — continued to pick up reaction, even after the online poll that spawned it closed.

Commenter Grow Smart argued for greater funding for public transit rather than new highways:

"[T]here are times when we must drive our cars and trips to Home Depot ... are good examples. Wouldn't it be nice if all those cars driven by people who had to drive just because there was no public transit were off the road? ... There [would] be less traffic slowing down those school buses, trucks, people hauling things and others who must drive."

Metro's board has approved allowing selected performances outside rail stations.

Commenter Extracellular also opposed the highway plan: "There are much better ways to spend $3 billion dollars, such as improving local intersections, building the Purple Line. Plus, the ICC will be a green light for more development."

Express asked readers about their thoughts on the ICC in a poll last Thursday. Eighty-three percent of the 310 votes cast came in support of the highway plan, 17 percent against it.

Lisa de Moraes

Washington Post TV columnist LISA DE MORAES was online Friday at washingtonpost.com to discuss the Rosie O'Donnell/Donald Trump feud and Mandy Patinkin's singing voice.

Looking forward to seeing what you have to say about the ridiculous Rosie/Donald thing. It's so perfect (in a ghastly sort of way).

I'm wondering if NBC, which is partnered with him on "Apprentice," thinks maybe The Donald has gone a tad too far, calling Rosie a fat pig and saying he will send one of his friends round to steal away her partner and that he's going to sue her for her comments—good luck on that one—because he wants to take money out of her fat [heinie] pocket. This is, after all, the same network that airs the over-weight-people empowering series "Biggest Loser." Mixed messages, don't you think? Of course this entire shout-fest is happening just as "The Apprentice" is about to return to the air. Some coincidence, huh?

Is "The View" even that successful of a show? Does anybody actually watch the show, or do they just watch the clips of the controversial parts on YouTube, like me?

Lots of that going on, yes, but the numbers on this show are up since Rosie came on board.

What's your Christmas TV gift? Mine is to have "The Office," "Lost" and "Scrubs" keep up their quality and not jump the shark.

I asked Santa if he could have an episode of "Criminal Minds" in which a pervy perp had to be lulled to sleep, so as to be disarmed, by Mandy Patinkin singing "Sonny Boy." There's nothing in the world quite like Mandy Patinkin singing "Sonny Boy."

The only person whose "Identity" continues to remain a mystery is Penn Gilette's. What the heck is he doing hosting this show? Nomination for better host: Sunglasses-lovin', eye-contact-avoiding, hands-on-hips, overly-intense Horatio from CSI: Miami.

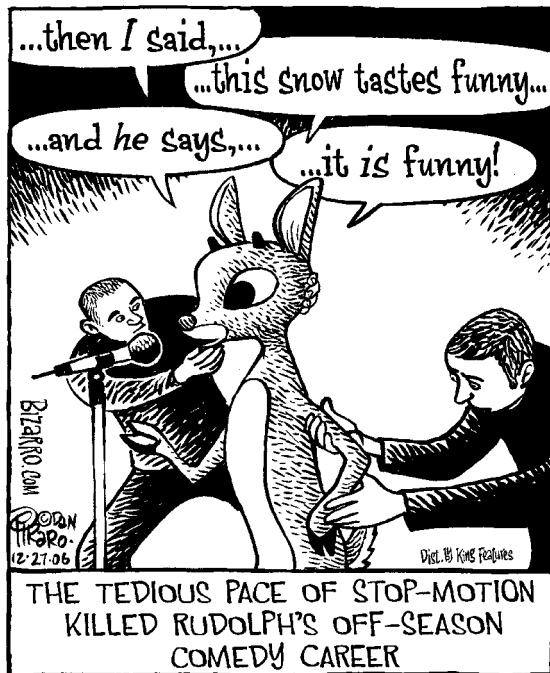

That's inspired, because David Caruso would smack some of these contestants on this show. I'd watch that. And enjoy it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) There may be something you have to do that proves emotionally difficult when all is said and done. Still, you have what it takes to do it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Try to get any of your leftover work done early so you can get to the fun stuff—and leave time for rest and relaxation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) When it rains it pours—and you must be ready for a little more of what has been coming your way lately, good or bad.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may be suffering somewhat as a result of a basic misconception. See if you can't get closer to the truth—the short way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may encounter an unknown rival who is ready and willing to put you through your paces and make you work for what you want. Are you ready?

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You must be willing to compromise if you wish to score any points at all. Victory doesn't have to be total at this time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A financial issue springs to the surface and demands the kind of attention you've been reluctant to give it. Concentration pays off.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Remain in and around the home. Contentment can truly be found in your own backyard, but only if you look there.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Try not to fluctuate too dramatically when it comes to decisions made in the workplace. Others are relying on you to be firm, steady.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You may encounter a fantastic challenge, and, although advice is available, it will be up to you to decide just how you want to proceed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You'll enjoy doing something routine in a new and exciting way, which is sure to attract the attention of someone important.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Take care you don't tease someone else so much that your efforts backfire and you wind up with more than egg on your face.

Losing Weight Takes Effort

IN RESPONSE TO "Obesity Linked to Bacteria" (Dec. 21): Irresponsible headlines like this give individuals more of a reason to deny that they are in control of their weight. Of the people I know who struggle with weight problems, all exhibit some combination of poor food choice and/or lack of exercise. Even differences in metabolism can be offset through proper nutrition and the right exercise regimen. Unfortunately, preventing obesity takes effort and self-control.
